Introductory Greeting.

C AMONG the many innovations at Columbian which are steadily bringing about its rapid evolution from the college of the 19th century to the great National University of the 20th century, none are more important than the advent of the old and time honored custom—an annual student publication. No University is complete without it.

The 1904 C Board has naturally had a degree of hesitancy in taking up so great an undertaking; due partly to the fact that this is Columbian's first Annual and also to the more stunning fact that the book had to be compiled, edited, published and delivered within the space of three short months.

However, it is here. The C has come to stay. May volume one be the nucleus for Columbian's great library of Annuals—one for each year of its future greatness.

If any part of the book pleases you—then we feel repaid. Linger on the page that pleases—pass quickly the page that displeases. With the hope that herein you will find a true representation of Columbian as she is today and with a greeting for all Columbians we now place ourselves at your mercy and retire behind the scenes.

THE UNIVERSITY.

THE PAST.

IT was one of the hopes of George Washington, from the founding of the capital in this city, that Congress might see fit to establish here a great national university. Jefferson and Madison in turn expressed the same hope. But Congress, doubting of its authority under the Constitution to conduct a university, failed to take action.

In 1819 the Rev. Luther Rice, a companion of Adoniram Judson in Burmah, touring America for missionary volunteers, was so impressed by the lack of education in the ministry and by the wonderful opportunity at the national capital for a great university, that he determined to secure those advantages for the Baptist denomination, and at once set about to procure funds to that end. He solicited contributions of one dollar and upwards from all classes of people in all parts of the Union.

Congress would not charter a denominational theological school, but a charter was obtained in 1821 with the encouragement of President Monroe, erecting "The Columbian College in the District of Columbia" for the "sole and exclusive purpose of educating youth in the English, learned and foreign languages, the liberal arts, sciences and literature," with power to confer all degrees "usually granted and conferred in colleges"; and with the provision that "Persons of all religious denominations shall be capable of being elected trustees, nor shall any person, either as president, professor, tutor or pupil, be refused admittance into said college or denied any privileges, immunities or advantages thereof for, or on account of, his sentiments in matters of religion." That liberal section was repealed in 1898, but was re-enacted in the present year.

A lot on College Hill, afterwards called Columbia Heights, comprising 46 1-2 acres, from Florida Avenue North to Columbia Road, between 14th and 15th Streets, was purchased for $7,000 contributed by many citizens of Washington, among whom were John Quincy Adams, William H. Crawford and John C. Calhoun, members of President Monroe's cabinet, and thirty-two members of Congress. The site is commemorated in the names of the streets in that block—University, Euclid, Welling, Huntingdon Places, Staughton, Chapin, Binney, Bacon Streets, and Columbia Road. A college building was completed in 1822 on the present site of Mr. Justice Harlan's home, at a cost of $35,000. Plans were at once made for opening Theological, Classical, Preparatory, Medical, Law and Philosophical Departments, which were all started during the next five years. There were between thirty and forty colleges in the country at that time.

Two professors were sent abroad to gather funds, books and ideas for the College. They visited the principal universities in England, Scotland, Germany, France, Switzerland and Italy. Many Englishmen contributed to the funds, including the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Bishop of Durham, Lord Ashburton, William Wilberforce, Sir James Mackintosh, Rev. Rowland Hill, Dr. Edward Bickersteth, Dr. Adam Clarke, and Hannah More, the authoress.

The College was formally opened January 9th, 1822, for classical and theological studies, with Rev. William Staughton, D. D., as President, and thirty-nine students in attendance.

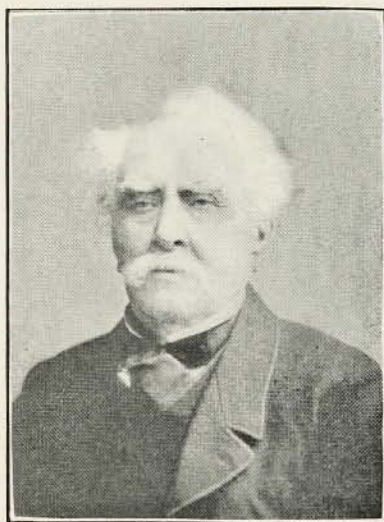

At the first commencement of the College, held on December 15th, 1824, three men were graduated, and there were present at the exercises the President of the United States, the Secretaries of State, War, and Navy, leading members from both houses of Congress, and General LaFayette.

The College was two miles from the city, which then had about 40,000 inhabitants, and the students were kept under the strict surveillance of the Faculty. In the laws of 1824, those parents who wished their sons to attend church rather than chapel on Sunday are recommended to place them in the care of some professor, so that the day may not be "transformed into a season of folly and crime." "It is anxiously recommended that visits to the city be requested as rarely as possible." No student should without permission be absent from his room after nine o'clock at night during the winter season, nor after ten during the fall and spring months. "Any member of the Faculty may enter the room of any student at pleasure, and some member of the Faculty shall visit the room of each student at least once a day in study hours and as much oftener as shall be deemed expedient." "The Trustees cannot abstain from expressing their strong and deep conviction of the impropriety of much pocket money being allowed to students." "Ten dollars a year is quite as much as ought in any case to be allowed for pocket money." "All the proper College charges, * * including tuition, library, board, fuel, bed, and bedding, room rent, steward's salary, servants, shoe blacking, etc., do not ordinarily exceed two hundred dollars." Table board at the College was $15 for the first term and $10 for the second. The students, early in 1825, numbered 150, from 21 of the 24 States, and one Territory besides the District of Columbia, which indicates the wide territory covered by the institution from the first. At present there are 1408 students, from every State in the Union, four territorial units, besides the District of Columbia, and eight foreign countries.

The Theological Department seems never to have been other than a part of the regular collegiate course. Some difference of opinion soon arose as to the relative importance of theological and classical studies. At the same time the finances of the College were not able to keep pace with the projects undertaken, and as there was no permanent endowment and some mismanagement, the institution was unable to meet its demands, and the Faculty resigned in a body in the spring of 1827, after the graduation of three classes. When all others fainted, however, there was one, Mr. Rice, who more than any other had the work which he had founded at heart, and through his untiring efforts the College was again placed upon its feet. Before his death in 1836, he had procured about $150,000 for the College, from almost every State in the Union. From that time to 1861 John Whithers of Virginia made various gifts amounting to about $70,000, and after the War, up to 1888, Mr. W. W. Corcoran was the principal contributor. John Quincy Adams was one of the earliest benefactors; and during President Jackson's first term Congress appropriated lots worth $25,000 for the benefit of the College, and a like amount to Georgetown. This is the only appropriation ever made by the Government to the institution.

The presidency was filled in turn by the Rev. Stephen Chapin, D. D., 1828-41, who redeemed it from the debt and suspicion which had caused the break in 1827; by the Rev. Joel S. Bacon, D. D.,

W. W. Corcoran.

James C. Welling.

1843-54, who started an endowment fund; the Rev. Joseph G. Binney, D. D., 1855-58; and the Rev. George W. Samson, D. D., 1859-71, who carried it through the Civil War. At the opening of that conflict the attendance was larger than it had ever been before, but soon most of the students left to take part on the one side or the other, and the College buildings were occupied by the Government for hospital purposes, though the College exercises were not suspended.

In 1871 James C. Welling, LL. D., was chosen President, and the Trustees were made self-perpetuating. In 1873 the name was changed to "The Columbian University," and the Trustees resolved to establish a School of Science. In 1879 it was decided to move all departments of the University into the heart of the city, and in 1884 the present building at the corner of 15th and H streets was occupied by the Classical and Law Departments and the Corcoran Scientific School just founded. In 1894 President Welling died, and the Rev. Samuel H. Green, D. D., a member of the Board of Trustees, acted as President pro tempore until the next year, when the Rev. Benaiah L. Whitman, D. D., was elected to the office. In 1898 the School of Comparative Jurisprudence and Diplomacy was established, John D. Rockefeller giving $25,000 for the purpose. In 1900 President Whitman resigned, and Dr. Green again acted as President until 1902, when Charles W. Needham, LL. D., formerly a successful lawyer of Chicago and member of the Board of Trustees of the University of Chicago, was chosen President.

Since entering upon his office President Needham has effected a reorganization of the University, by which the College, the Corcoran Scientific School and the School of Graduate Studies are merged in the Department of Arts and Sciences. The undergraduate course for the degree may be completed in three years of 20 hours instead of four years of 15 hours. Also students who intend to continue in the professional schools may save a further year by taking ten hours of their week's schedule in professional studies. In 1903 Van Ness Park, comprising about five acres at the southwest corner of C and 17th Streets, S. W. was purchased by the University, and it is planned to pay for this lot and to erect the proposed Corcoran Building by the sale of the buildings at the corner of 15th and H Streets and the Columbian Building on 5th Street.

The Medical School was started in 1825 and continued its sessions through 1828-9 when the Classical Department was abandoned; but from 1835-39 it was interrupted for some reason not now known, and during the War for three years there were no regular sessions. It is the oldest medical school in the District, and the seventeenth in the country. It has been located at various times in different parts of the city. Up to 1835 in a building rented by the Faculty, the location of which is not known; after 1839 for five years on Louisiana Avenue opposite the City Hall, then in the Washington Infirmary on Judiciary Square until 1861, when that building was burned; then for two years in the "Constitution Office" on E Street, and from 1865-67 in a church structure on Fifth Street afterwards the Columbian Law Building. In 1867 the School moved into the building on H Street given by Mr. Corcoran for the purpose, which had formerly been the Corcoran Art Gallery and had been used during the War as an army medical museum. In 1902 that building gave way to the new one now in use. In 1898 the neighboring building formerly occupied by the Preparatory School from 1882 until 1897, when that school was abandoned, was fitted up as a hospital for the University, and in 1902 the present hospital building was added. When the School began, a two years' course was given until 1879, when it was changed to three, and in 1893 to four years. In 1884 a resolution was adopted after much opposition, admitting women to the School, but in 1892 it was repealed.

In 1887 the Medical Faculty borrowed money from the University to establish a Dental Department and add a third story to the building for its use. A three years' dental course was arranged in conjunction with the Medical School, which was changed in 1903 to four years. Women were admitted from the first, though only two graduated prior to 1892, when they were excluded from this as well as the Medical School.

The Law School was first organized in February 1826, and the Hon. William Cranch, Chief Justice of the Circuit Court of the United States and Reporter to the Supreme Court, and the C Hon. W. T. Carroll were appointed professors. The School was involved in the financial difficulties of 1827 and was abandoned until 1865, when it was again resumed in the Columbian Law Building on Fifth Street on the site of the present Columbian Building, where it remained until 1884. Counting from its re-establishment it is the oldest law school in Washington, and it was the first school in the country to establish a graduate course leading to the degree of Master of Laws. Its success has been marked from the beginning, and its students now number more than those of any other department of the University. Its graduates are found in every State of the Union and many foreign countries.

Some years before his death President Welling had evolved the scheme of a school of comparative jurisprudence as an adjunct of the Law School. This idea was supplemented by Dr. Needham, then a member of the Board of Trustees, with the idea of a school of diplomacy, and in 1898 the School of Comparative Jurisprudence and Diplomacy was established, being the only one of its kind in the world outside of Paris. Dr. Needham was made Dean of this and the Law School, and the Law course was extended from two to three years. In 1899 the present Law Building on H Street was erected and the Schools of Law installed in their present home. Since 1902 the sessions have been held in the afternoon instead of the evening.

Owing to their happy situation at the national capital the Schools of Law are able to secure the services on their teaching staffs of many eminent men engaged in the Executive and Judicial Departments of the Government. In the faculties past and present are found such names as the Hon. William Cranch, Francis Wharton the legal writer, Mr. Justice Harlan, Mr. Justice Brewer, Hon. Caleb Cushing, George Ticknor Curtis, Hon. John W. Foster, Hon. Hannis Taylor, and many others of national reputation.

The Scientific Department was organized in 1884 and named the Corcoran Scientific School in honor of the trustee who was then so liberally contributing toward the various departments of the University. The sessions were held in the main building from six to ten p. m. Women were admitted to its courses from the beginning, and in 1890 after much discussion they were admitted to the collegiate department as well. In 1902 the Scientific School was incorporated in the Department of Arts and Sciences, and all sessions are now held before six p. m.

THE FUTURE.

THE most difficult of all arts is prophecy. The Delphian oracle, the Pythian oracle, and all the other gold-brick schemes of ancient times found it so; and had it not been for the amazing credulity of their patrons, they would have been obliged to go out of business long before they did. Again, Napoleon could not fore-see St. Helena. Lexington and Bunker Hill brought up with a round turn the braggart predictions of King George, the Parliament, and the British Generals. In our own day the United States Weather Bureau has frequent and various troubles of its own which often periclitate its reputation; while the most astute of the denizens of Wall Street not infrequently has a fall. And so, to attempt a prophecy for the future of an individual, or of an institution, is by no means the easy task that a casual observer might consider it to be:—a prophecy, that is, which shall be based upon a course of sound logical reasoning and which shall therefore have some small chance of ever being a reality. What have we to base our predictions on? Only the man's past and the promises which that may have seemed to make for the future. But this is by no means a sure foundation; for how many men in middle life are fulfilling the expectations of the friends of their youth? How many of the promises of doing great things in the world, which they seemed to make during their college days, are ever redeemed in later years? Emerson answers the query when he says;—"We see young men who owe us a new world, so readily and lavishly they promise, but they never acquit the debt; they die young and dodge the account: or if they live, they lose themselves in the crowd." Truly indeed, all this at times seems enough to make our happy optimists recidivate.

And then who of us in such a case (if he have any personal interest in the matter) can entirely blot out, even for the time being, his own individuality, and become a mere mathematical machine calculating with exactitude the influence of this or that factor upon the development of the man or of the institution? Such a thing is impossible. Our picture will inevitably be colored by the personal desires and hopes which we cherish in regard to the subject of our predictions; and this must be peculiarly true when that subject is any educational institution and when the students of that institution become the forecasters of its future. And so let us now acknowledge, once and for all, that our system of horoscopy is not one of occult divination, nor does it depend upon that ignoble consummation of the science of Algebra,—the Theory of Chances; it is rather the expression of what we hope and desire to see in the Columbian University of the future, when the plans of campaign as outlined by the President and his council shall have been brought to complete fruition. For it is in these plans that we find not only the ultimate basis for our hopes, but also the set of premises from which we must argue if we would see what this university logically can become within the next few years.

The university as a whole, its alumni, trustees, faculties, and students, feel that in Dr. Needham a leader has been found, who, combining the qualities of the distinguished scholar with those of the practical man of affairs, can most successfully guide this, by no means small, enterprise to its full completion. The enthusiastic interest in the welfare of the institution that has been aroused among so many of its formerly lukewarm adherents, the numerous pledges of support, the bringing of the name of Columbian prominently before the public, the setting on foot of sound and conservative plans for development, the revival of athletic activity,—all these go to make up a composite tribute to the energy, ability, breadth of view, and personality of one man—the President. During his administration there has been instilled into the university authorities a spirit of initiative and the courage to branch out, a thing which formerly they hesitated to do, fearing that the outcome of the enterprise might not be successful. But Dr. Needham knows that "our doubts are traitors, and make us lose the good we oft might win, by fearing to attempt." To his support there will certainly rally all those who earnestly desire to see this university take its rightful place in the rank and file of American universities and colleges.

The new buildings which are to be erected on the land recently acquired at the corner of Seventeenth Street and Virginia Avenue, and which will comprise buildings of administration, lecture halls and laboratories, a gymnasium, and dormitories for students, will supply a want that has been too long disregarded. They will make possible a genuine college life for undergraduates. That this is a sine qua non in the development of any really strong and lasting college spirit is a fact well recognized by both faculties and students of all institutions where the system is in existence today. The intimate association into which men, living together in dormitories and engaged in the same lines of work, are brought every day makes of the student body a far more unified and coherent mass than it can possibly become under any other system. This is speaking, of course, of the distinctively undergraduate portion of the student-body,—that portion which is ordinarily the nucleus of the whole university and which furnishes practically all the enthusiasm and support for the various features that go to make up the entire university life. While this is the ordinary condition of affairs at such institutions as Harvard, Yale, and Princeton, at Columbian, on the other hand, the exact reverse has for many years obtained, and all athletic and musical organizations, as well as the debates, have been obliged to look to the professional schools for their principal support. We expect, as the years go by, to see all this changed, with the management of all purely student enterprises in the hands of the undergraduates, who will thus be bound together by the ties of common interests into a homogeneous body, from which there must come in the future a stronger and far more loyal band of alumni than Columbian has ever been able to boast in the past. We may safely predict that our athletic teams will then be worthy foemen of those representing the foremost colleges of the country, and that our glee clubs, dramatic clubs, and other organizations of like character will be able to attract large and critical audiences both in this and in other cities where they may appear.

It has often been said that Washington ought to be, and is bound to become, the great educational centre of our country. The reasonableness of the first part of this proposition cannot be denied, for certainly no city has a greater inherent right to take the lead in all things which look to higher standards of culture and education than the capital of a nation. As to the prediction contained in the above proposition no one can, of course, speak with absolute assurance at the present time regarding either its fulfillment or its non-fulfillment. But it is safe to say that, if such ever comes to pass, Columbian University will be not the least of the factors that will have contributed to make Washington the hub of the educational universe.

C The suggestion has recently been made that the American University, the National University, and Columbian should combine for the purpose of forming one distinctively national university. This suggestion has been very favorably received by many persons who desire to see a really great educational institution located here in Washington, and the plan certainly has many advantages to offer. In the first place, three national universities are out of the question. Such competition as must result will of necessity seriously impair the usefulness of each; while a combination of the three, with a harmonious adjustment of the courses of study in all departments, would undoubtedly attract large numbers of students from all over the country. Such an institution could, we believe, do a great work along the lines of post-graduate study and original research, and do it in such a way as to strengthen very materially the undergraduate department. Then, too, this composite institution could undoubtedly obtain what no one of the three now receives,—financial aid from Congress. This, it is unnecessary to remark, is a factor of prime importance. In any amalgamation of this sort Columbian will unavoidably be the nucleus about which the whole organization will center. For while the American University has two or three buildings, no students and no teaching force, and the National University has no undergraduate department and no medical department, we, on the other hand, are a university of long standing, having a full complement of buildings, a faculty of nearly two hundred, and students to the number of over fourteen hundred, registered in all the departments that logically comprise a university, in the common acceptance of the term. It is therefore difficult to see how any arrangement that did not preserve our organization almost intact could reasonably be proposed.

The position of Columbian University in the educational world has for many years been unique. It has offered to young men, dependent upon their own exertions for a livelihood and employed by the United States Government here in Washington, something which they could never have obtained without its help,—that is, the higher and professional education. This it has done by opening to such men courses of instruction in which lectures are given after the office hours of the government employees are over for the day. The records of many of these men if we consider how severe have been their handicaps both in time and money, have been, indeed, remarkable. To many of them great success in the outside world has come as a result of the training received at this institution. In all this, Columbian has fulfilled what we believe to be a very noble mission. That it should continue so to do we believe to be a bounded duty. We earnestly hope to see the time when largely attended day courses of the highest excellence shall be given in every department; but we hope just as earnestly never to see the time, so long at least as energy and ambition go hand in hand with youth, when, through the abolition of night courses, the door of opportunity shall be shut in the face of the man of limited means, who is desirous of reaching a higher plane of culture and education, and of increasing his powers for usefulness and for service to his fellow-man.

Columbian University can have no higher function than to make of its students good citizens of the Republic,—citizens of honesty and honor, who shall look upon the suffrage as a priceless heritage, with a value far beyond the power of dollars and cents to measure; citizens who shall consider a public office as a public trust and who shall scorn to use that trust for purposes of personal gain; citizens who shall ever stand unflinchingly for justice and right under all circumstances and against all pressure. May every Columbian man be another Folk, a fierce and fearless fighter of corruption and iniquity in every form throughout the length and breadth of the land. And above all, may the time never come when it shall be possible to utter in the same room the name of an alumnus of this institution and that unsightly, evil-intentioned, and most tiresome word,—“graft.” But only Columbian men? No,—men of all colleges must unite against the grafters, the bribe-givers, and the bribe-takers, whether they be United States Senators or officials of the Post-Office Department. Men of education everywhere must oppose all those influences that tend to lower the standards of civic morality. For if ever the educated class as a whole ceases to fight against and becomes infected with this disease of corruption and bribery, then indeed will begin the decline and fall of the American Republic, and the virtues that have made us great, and have inspired the wonder and admiration of the whole world, will be known no longer among us.

C We look for a new Columbian and a greater; but we must not think that new buildings alone can encompass this desired end. Upon alumni and students rests a heavy responsibility. Through them the institution is to be known and judged. Through them its educational standards are to be recognized. Through them, as men and citizens, and through their standing in the community, the high ideals of patriotism and honor to which this university looks are to be avowed. With this thought always in mind, and with the knowledge ever before him that not only does he need the university and its teachings, but that the university also needs him and depends upon him, each student and alumnus must be inspired to higher ambitions, to more earnest efforts, and to greater achievements. Thus shall the name and fame of his Alma Mater be spread abroad throughout our whole country and become known of all men.

MEDICAL 1904.

OUR OWN CASE.

Name—Columbian Medical 1904.

Age—Three years, six months.

Sex—Male.

Residence—1325 H Street.

FAMILY HISTORY.

Born at the Old Building. Alma Mater very much alive, and well. Many older brothers living, but nothing is known as to their present. Three younger brothers are said to be vigorous and bright. Many brothers-in-law are considered brilliant.

PREVIOUS HISTORY.

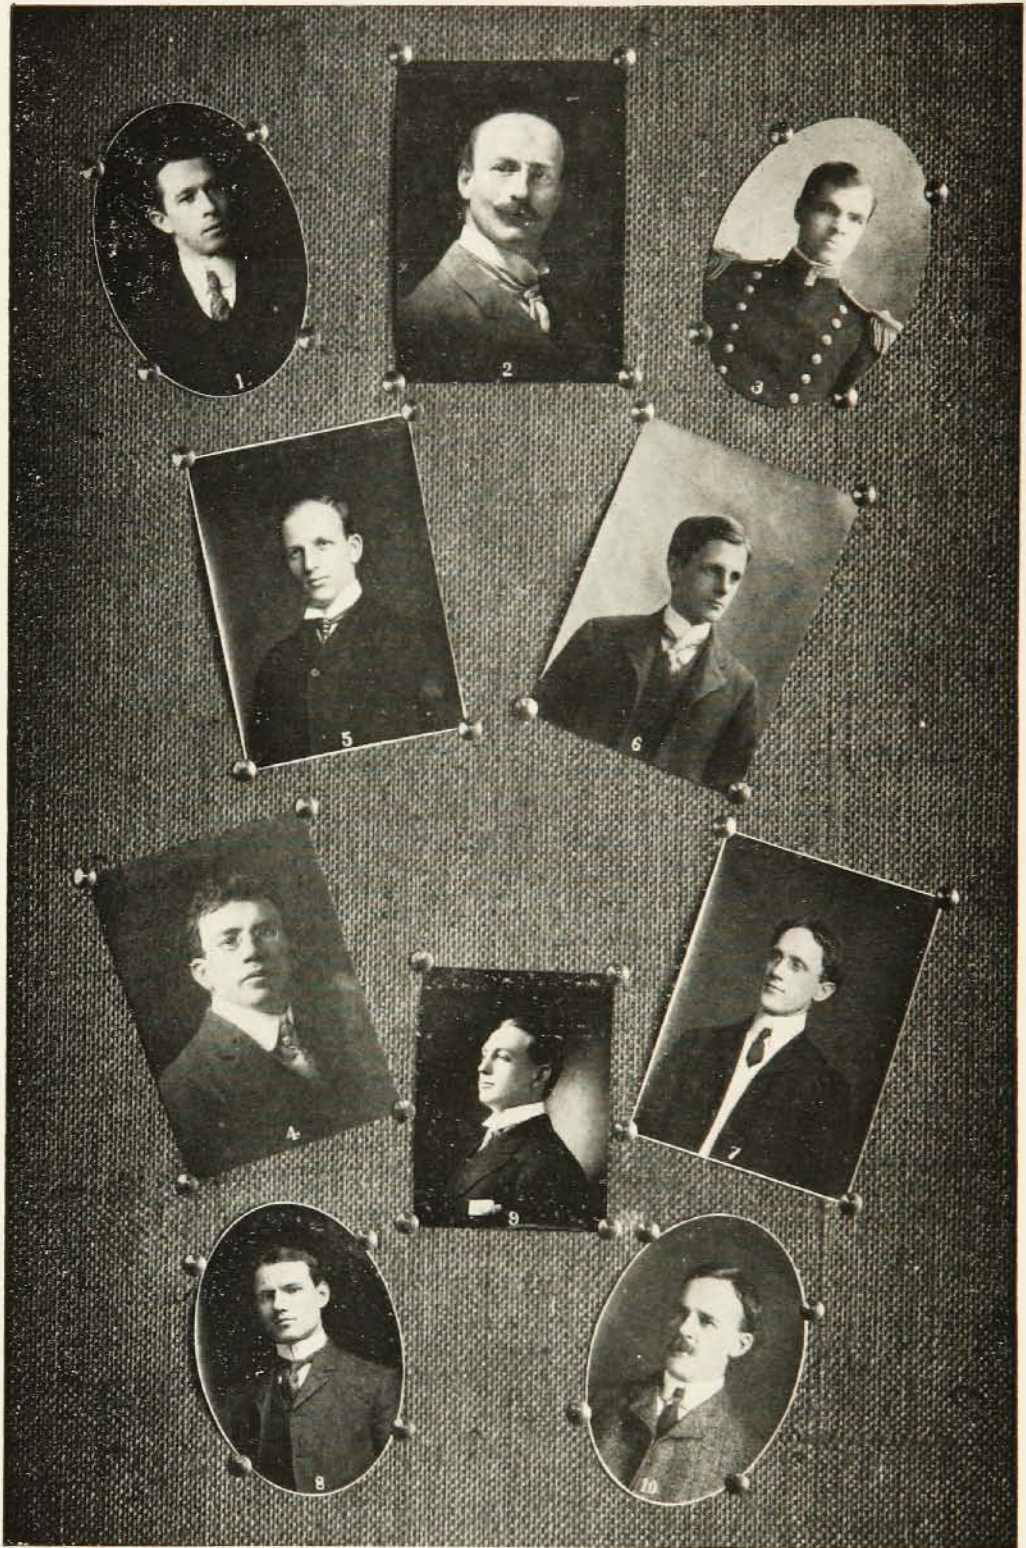

Birth fairly normal. Several conditions were treated by Dr. McKimmie. Artificially fed on Dr. Sterling's Therapeutic Milk. Had the usual diseases of childhood, with fair recoveries under Dr. Lawrence and others. Dentition normal—wisdom teeth expected soon. Has used tobacco in moderation, and recently has been very much under the influence of Needham's Spirits.

HISTORY OF PRESENT ILLNESS.

Began over two years ago. In Spring of 1902 examination showed a relative insufficiency of a physiological and chemical nature. Some members became mortified, and were cut off by Dr. Carr and others. In the following year much festering resulted from bad hygiene, and some violent mental outbreaks required restraint by the Police of Anacostia. Has been treated for cerebral incompetency by Drs. Copeland and Reichelderfer.

PRESENT CONDITION.

Restless and anxious, with frequent outbursts of delirium, muttering at one moment "What else? What else? WHAT ELSE?" and the next shouting "Food! Food!! FOOD!!"

BILL OF PARTICULARS.

In ye fourth year law class 1904.

In volume 1464 of his love letters, page 894, Solomon says: "He that hath two evils to choose from is lightly burthened, but deeply is he mistified who must choose the winning horse from a good field; yea verily." The deep wisdom in this proverb is but again made evident by the lack of conscience as to "who is who" in the 1904 fourth year law class. Statistics show that there is an abundance of good material for every office. Still a few names are found ahead of their tickets and therefore you will please take notice that the following is the bill of particulars of the plaintiffs' demands in this case; for the establishment of which they have brought this suit.

- 1st. That there are eight of the class married: they can be easily picked.
- 2d. That the average age in the class is 28 years.
- 3d. That the average height in the class is 5 feet 8 inches.
- 4th. That the average weight in the class is 154 lbs.
- 5th. That the plaintiffs herein to wit: the members of the 1904 fourth year law class were most law abiding, peaceable (never attended a dance or foot-ball game) and studious class, all of whom more or less give great promise of future greatness and that from this number their associates have been chosen specified and determined upon the following as principals to fill the places assigned, which choice is as follows to wit:
 - a. Brightest man, Henry G. Thomas, with little competition, was voted for this place.
 - b. Most popular, Lawson N. Mace, the gentleman from Indiana won, with William H. Linkins running close second.
 - c. Prettiest man, (no women in the class) Richard Drum Engel won by a nose, Howard Saxton was his close second.

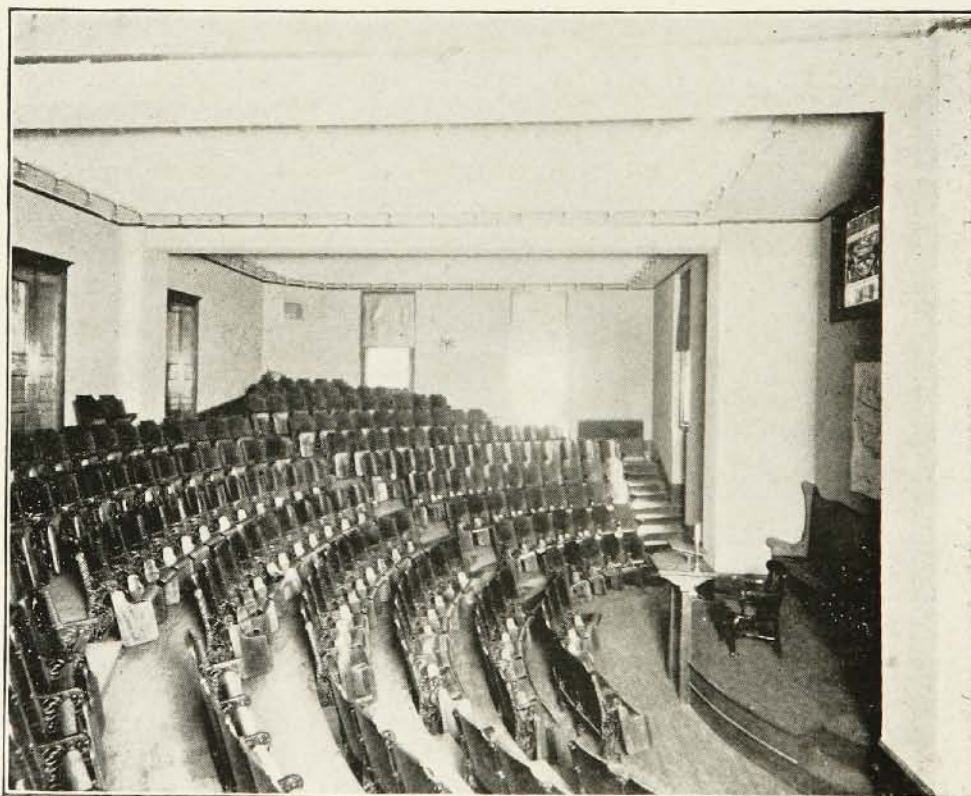

- d. Shrewdest politician. This was a closely contested office between Thomas P. Littlepage of Indiana and John W. Jedlan of Illinois; both received the same number of votes; they must divide the honor.
- e. Most loyal to class, by a large majority was allotted to John W. Jedlan.
- f. Worst knocker, no class can really succeed without a knocker—A. J. Heinbeck is the one who must use the hammer as he won easily.
- g. Most conceited man Paul V. Keyser is declared elected, receiving ninety-nine votes and Harold J. Pack the other one.
- h. Favorite professor, Dr. Swisher was voted this honor.

IN YE MOOT COURT OF YE COLUMBIAN UNIVERSITY

Department of Law.

Ye Class of 1904

Petitioner

Ye Columbian University

Defendant:

} Bill for Divorce.

To ye Honorable Walter C. Clephane, Chief Justice of ye said Court and by the vote of ye class its most popular professor:

The petition of ye petitioner respectfully showeth:

That ye petitioner was, on ye First day of October, A. D. 1901, lawfully joined to ye respondent by the act of Channing Rudd, D. C. L., and hath from that time until the 31ts day of May A. D. 1904, paid due and diligent attention to ye instruction offered and given by ye said defendant, and has in all respects duly discharged ye duties by law and custom required of ye petitioner by virtue of its said union, which acts and deeds are in part as follows:

■ Ye petitioner did duly expel, throw out and bodily eject vi et armis, ye class of 1903, when wilfully, unlawfully and with malice aforethought they did enter ye class meeting and did attempt to rough house therein.

Ye petitioner did duly hold on each and every year a smoker, as by custom required, at each of which said smokers did appear some one or more agents of ye defendant, among others, the following: to-wit: Arthur W. Peter, Walter C. Clephane, John Paul Earnest, ye most worthy dean of ye Law School, and ye president of ye University; which said agents were made and declared guests of honor, and were allowed to speak to and address ye petitioners and were allowed the privilege of ye floor much to the damage of the complainant.

That ye petitioner did in ye year 1903, in conjunction with ye most Honorable Justice Harlan, duly and according to the law and custom in such cases made and provided, humble, chastise, and expel ye class of 1905 from ye Jurisprudence Hall and from ye Law Building.

That ye petitioner hath weekly and uncomplainingly listened twice to ye tale of ye Minister of Hayti and of ye brakeman who kissed ye feme sole passenger, and have thrice heard ye narrative of ye man who satisfied ye obligation by giving ye note therefor, and that ye tale of ye Hunyadi Janos and of ye Syrup of Figs, hath time without number been listened to, as aforesaid, meekly and uncomplainingly.

That ye petitioner hath, as of course, and without comment, endured ye many changes in ye course of study, ye divers and sundry examinations and hath, as befitted its station, borne and endured ye jeers and gibes of ye moot court judges.

And ye petitioner further showeth that said union as aforesaid hath given rise to the following most worthy issue, to wit:

Exhibit "A": Ye most popular man, James G. Shibley.

Exhibit "B": Ye brightest man, Leslie C. Fuller.

Exhibit "C": Ye most handsome man, Meyer C. Wagner.

Exhibit "D": Ye most astute politician, Carney M. Layne.

And ye petitioner further showeth that ye knocking of ye 15 knockers and ye spoutings of ye 9 conceited members, and ye harangues of ye many volunteers, and ye jeers and gibes of ye moot court judges, and ye vaudeville performances, and ye tales of ye absque hoc, and many and divers other causes herein set forth have made the condition of ye petitioner intolerable and life burdensome, and by reason thereof this complainant has been compelled to leave ye Lecture Hall, ye home of said defendant.

Wherefore ye petitioner prayeth that a subpoena may issue from said court, directed to Chas. W. Needham, commanding him to appear at ye National Theatre on May 31, 1904, to answer this petition, and also that a degree of this University be given granting petitioner a divorce from ye defendant, and that such LL. B's be allowed as the circumstances will admit of.

Tune—"Down where the Wurzburger Flows."

A toast we'll drink to the lawyers of 1906
With Arts and Sciences we do not care to mix
The "Ki Yis" are pie eyes when we are around,
If it comes to a show down they can't stand their ground,
The Doctors are kind, but the lawyers for mine,
At dear old Columbian.

GEORGETOWN VS. COLUMBIAN.

NEW NATIONAL THEATRE.

May 26, 1903.

C Resolved, That corporations organized under the laws of the several states, which sell and deliver the greater portion of their products in other States than the one in which organized, or which list their stocks upon the public stock exchanges for sale to the people of all the States, should be regulated by the Congress of the United States and be required by Congress to make periodical sworn reports of their business, submit at stated periods their books of accounts to Federal officers for examination and report, and in all other respects to conduct their business in accordance with the laws of the United States.—Georgetown affirmative, Columbian negative.

W. C. Franklin.

J. B. Hawley.

O. C. Carpenter.

Judges : John R. Proctor, President Civil Service Commission; James R. Garfield, Commissioner of Corporations; William E. Fuller, Assistant Attorney-General.

DECISION OF JUDGES: The burden of proof is not shifted from the affirmative to the negative, as claimed by the affirmative. The contention of the affirmative that under the statement of the question a constitutional amendment is permissible, is not tenable. The last sentence is not controlling as claimed by the negative. The affirmative has not sustained its argument concerning corporations listing their stocks, but has as to corporations who sell and deliver goods in other states. Upon these conclusions, the decision is awarded the affirmative.

The establishment of a weekly newspaper in Columbian has been one of the most important achievements of the year. Alive to the requirements of a well conducted newspaper, the WEEKLY COLUMBIAN has won a warm place in Columbian hearts and already has become a firmly fixed feature of Columbian life. It has worked much good in the student body and deserves its remarkable success.

The position of Editor-in-Chief has been ably filled by Mr. Jesse W. Barrett, Law '05, of Missouri, and the associate editors are: Faculty, Dr. Mitchell Carroll; Alumni, Stanton C. Peele; Co-Eds., Sarah Agnes Wallace; Arts and Sciences, Paul Noble Peck; Medicine, A. N. Tasker; Dentistry, Arthur M. Trivett; Law, O. C. Carpenter; Jurisprudence and Diplomacy, Luther Mason Walter. The credit for the establishment of the paper is due largely to its most efficient Business Manager, Mr. O. L. Ferris, Law '05, of Iowa.

ATHLETICS

THE ATHLETIC OUTLOOK.

A fair prospect in spite of an ill start.

THE measure of a university's athletics is a measure of its average student. Yet Columbian consented for half a century to so low an athletic measure as to rank it, big as it is, with small colleges and strong academies. Year after year, a few students gathered together in the fall or spring, practising intermittantly, playing a convenient schedule with mighty little credit to their Alma Mater, stood for Columbian and its student body. It was not a pretty sight. Fortunately it could not last.

The revolt was due to several sources. Primarily it resulted from a widening appreciation of athletics as a university influence, an increase in university and college spirit, and a strong desire to raise Columbian to its proper athletic rank. It was immediately due, however, to three freshmen—Albert, Maupin, and Rickets; all of the old Corcoran Scientific School. In their judgement the first need was an athletic association in which the whole institution was interested. The second was closely related to the first; that it was desirable to begin with the endorsement of the faculty. The first mass-meeting of the student body, looking to the establishment of the association, was based on this platform and held in February 1902.

C As a result, a Constitution and By-Laws were drafted, patterned after those of the leading universities, and adopted within a few weeks after the meeting. Officers, boards, and managers were elected and appointed, and the movement was launched by which Columbian was to take the advanced position in athletics she now holds.

The Football season of 1901 had not been a great success. "Ringers" and almost anybody played without practice or preparation. As a consequence, the games and scores showed it. In spite of this the new movement was supported with great energy and enthusiasm.

The tract proved too much for students who work during the day and go to school in the evening, so, with the exception of two lost relay races—one against Johns Hopkins and one in the University of Pennsylvania Meet—and a first prize in the shot-put, Columbian was not listed.

In Base-Ball a better field was found and a well organized team which played some sort of a standard schudule was the outcome. The results, it is true, were not as satisfying as desired, but still it was a movement in the right direction.

With this impetus the actual work in athletics began, and a Football squad came out in the Fall of 1902, ready to practice and to play the schedule of games as arranged by the Association. Lack of funds for guarantees and trips prevented some of the games from being played but still those which did occur showed the possibility for that branch of athletics at Columbian. Yet with this increased effort in the athletic work, a comparative decrease of interest was shown in the University Athletic Association. Meetings were scantily attended, interest lagged, and dissolution was imminent.

The greater success of the 1902 Football team over the team of 1901, not only cheered things up a bit but also netted a profit.

BOARD OF ATHLETIC DIRECTORS

1 Chas. T. Clark.	2 Rudd.	3 Alexander.	4 Sterrett.	5 C. C. Clark.
6. Shute,	7 Phillips.	8 Kelly,	9 Brown.

These, with the proceeds of our "Famous Smoker" put the Base Ball team of 1903 on the field. What that team had to contend against and overcome is all set forth in another place.

At this time the Athletic Association, as founded by the three freshmen, ceased to exist and the Board of Trustees of the University appointed the present Board of Directors of University Athletics, which thus came into life and work. To them is due the Base-Ball team of 1903, and the success of our 1903 Football season, the present Athletic Association with its Constitution and By-Laws and the present position of Columbian in the College Athletic World.

With such a history of spasmodic efforts toward athletic formation, what can be expected of Columbian in the future along those lines?

A great deal!

What with the new athletic organization and its wise and thoughtful provisions; the stand Columbian has taken in good clean athletics; an awakened faculty and student enthusiasm in that line; a new field; the courts, the park, the prospects of Greater Columbian; all this surely must help to make us progress as we should and rank Columbian in a few years among the honored list in the College Athletic World.

Hitherto, lack of fields, athletic building and apparatus, has barred Columbian from the fields of Basket Ball, Lacross, Golf, Cricket, Hockey, Tennis, Track and Rowing, but now, with new courts, Tennis should forge ahead, the use of the rowing machines should pull a crew into the water, and the new fields and buildings, should make all the other sports before unknown and unspoken of at Columbian not only possible but actual.

Columbian's day has come! Let all help to make it the success it should be.

A SEASON'S BASE BALL SUCCESS.

HE base-ball outlook for 1903 was not promising. With little or no funds on hand, most of the experienced men of the 1902 team were missing, and no apparent interest from the student body, the management and the loyal supporters of the game were forced to question seriously the outcome of the season's work.

Early in the Spring of 1903, the Board of Directors of University Athletics noticed the trend affairs were taking, and immediately took charge, conceived and carried out "The Smoker," and began to boom Base-Ball. The funds resulting from this scheme eliminated the financial difficulties which were at first so discouraging, and the awakened student enthusiasm did away with the second short-coming.

The question then was—"How about the Team?"

At the call, a fair sized squad appeared and a hard-working, sport-loving, loyal squad it proved to be. How many with no regular park at their service would have practised one evening at Van Ness Park, the next at the old base-ball grounds on Seventh Street, and if in luck, back to the Van Ness grounds the next evening, but if otherwise, "back to the woods"? Not many, and those who would not have objected to the change of grounds would certainly have refused to carry their paraphernalia with them on each move. But this the squad did.

It was not until well towards the end of the season that the services of Mr. Barr as coach could be had. The improvement due to his efforts was immediately manifest.

What was the result?

The first game was as complete a victory as one could wish to see, and Johns Hopkins was sent home with a better idea of Columbian's athletics than its men may have had before. A little ragged work and a lack of ability at the stick gave Brown the second game. St. Johns proved easy and M. A. C. was not even counted in the running. Yet, with Service home, "hitting an examination," and some of the others away—together with the fact that they were accustomed to playing on their own hill side—M. A. C. had an easy victory. Gallaudet took the next for much the same reason. Then Fulcher was prevented from going to Annapolis with the team and Bielaski had to go into the box, and the infield was broken up to such an extent, that the Navy boys had little trouble in winning their game.

But it was the Georgetown game, lost though it was, which pleased us most. How many expected Columbian to score at all, much less to hold the defeaters of Yale, Princeton, Harvard, and others, down to a score of 3—2, with a very fair chance of winning in the last inning? Not many, and if for no other reason than that here they showed their ability to play good snappy ball, the 1903 Team was a great success.

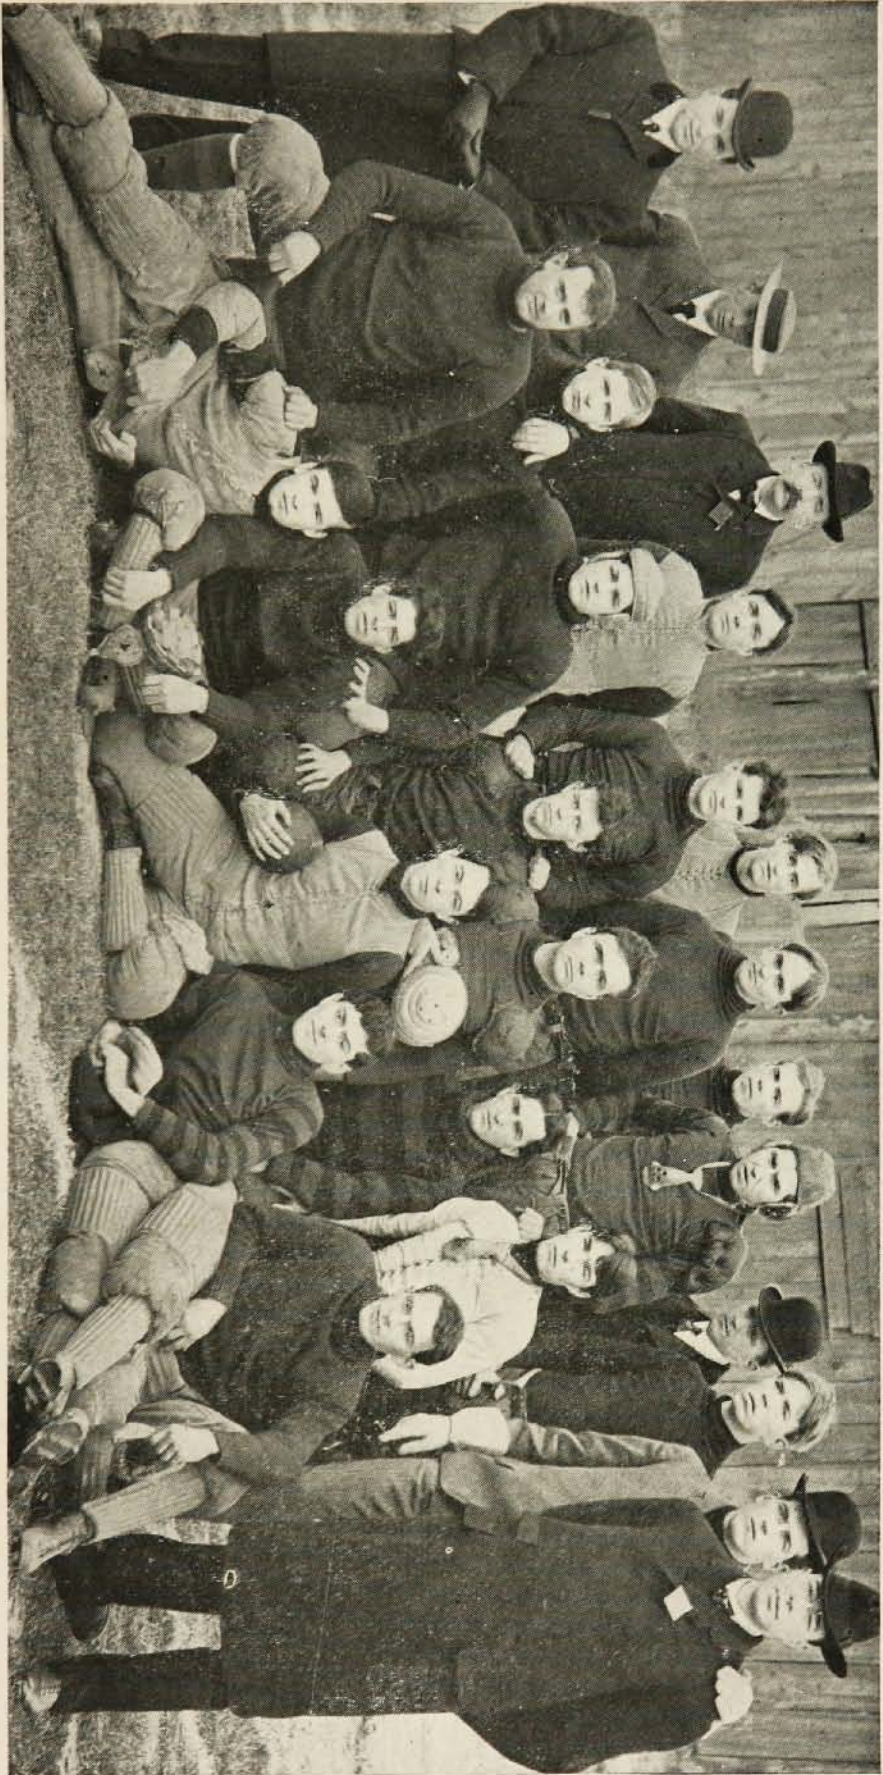

C The Georgetown game was followed by another defeat from the Maryland Athletic Club of Baltimore. Two easy games from the Gallaudet Team ended the season most agreeably.

THE FOOT BALL SEASON OF 1903.

WHEN the Football season of 1903 opened, there were but a few men from Columbian on University Field, poorly equipped and for the most part inexperienced. They practiced two or three hours each day punting and falling on the ball with determined energy and in pathetic solitude. Before the season closed, it saw a well trained, well provided team, escorted through the streets by a howling mob of University students, whose wild enthusiasm for Columbian, defeat could not lower and victory could scarcely have heightened. In memory of such a season we write the word SUCCESS.

Undoubtedly the greatest benefit to a University from its athletics is the enthusiastic and loyal devotion of the student body to its Alma Mater, inspired by contests with rival institutions on the field of sports. From this point of view the past football season was pre-eminently successful. The hard, earnest work of the team, its plucky fights against great odds, no less than the victories won, called forth a spirit new in the history of Columbian; a spirit which pervaded and united the different colleges and drew together the varied interests into which the life of a great university is divided.

It is not our desire nor purpose to portion with careful measure the credit for the season's results among those whose combined endeavor produced them. We recognize Columbian's great obligation to the coaches whose faithful, intelligent and gratuitous labors overcame such difficulties as few coaches have to confront. We have in mind a faculty director whose presence upon the practice field was as constant as that of the "pig-skin" itself. Without the able work of the management, the team and the year could have been nothing but a failure. To the Captain who ably and conscientiously led the team, taking up the difficult and trying duties of his position in mid-season, no small share of credit is due. And what shall be said of the team itself, which worked and sacrificed, not only for the present season, but for the future to obtain the best results possible with the purpose to prepare the way for greater teams which shall follow it? Last, but no less heartily, we acknowledge our debt to the "man who didn't make the team," who never won cheers from the bleachers and does not wear a "C" upon his breast, but without whom the team could not have been.

To all these Columbian owes a debt of gratitude and of honor. It is with pride that we record their names and their services to their Alma Mater, and we consider it peculiarly appropriate that this, the first number of The C, should pay tribute to the football season of 1903, which we believe marks the birth of a Greater Columbian in athletics.

LINE-UP OF 1903.

TAILORING QUARTZ

*And What It Assays to

High-grade ore abounds in the Mertz tailoring claim. It's the richest ore there is—it assays at a glance to the full value of any price asked. No other tailoring quartz you know of will pan out so satisfactorily—so profitably.

The Suit to Order at $10

A nugget of unusual value. There's $10 worth on the face of it—the fabric—the style—shows that much value. If you go into the details of the making—the lining—you'll pan out as much more value.

It'll pay you to stake out a claim in Mertz tailoring and strike it rich in a spring suit that'll prove surpassing in value—surpassing in satisfaction.
